*For Catholic leaders, lesbian/gay persons and

their family, friends,
and advocates*

Lesbian/Gay Catholics in a Sacramental Church

Perhaps no idea is more basic to Catholic identity and understanding than that sacraments impart and celebrate the grace that God so freely and abundantly gives us. These rituals are essential to the way we compose our lives, our relationships, our purpose and ministry in the world, our community of faith, and our connection to the divine.

Coinciding as they do with turning points and watersheds in our personal development, they become for Catholics major guideposts for how we live and love. That the sacraments are being systematically denied scandalizes many inside and outside the Church.

Whether it be the vexing questions of the definition of marriage in civil and ecclesial sectors, the banning of gay men from ordination to the priesthood, the denial of the Eucharist to lesbian/gay people in committed relationships, these difficult issues call the Catholic community to examine, reflect, and discuss some of the most basic features of our religious identity.

UNCHARTED WATERS AND DARING IMAGINATION:
FAITH AND COMING OUT

March 16, 2007, 9:00 AM to 4:00 PM

Faith is normally passed on through elements of continuity in growing up, but discovering oneself GLBT is usually experienced as a rupture in “fitting in.” How does the gift of faith itself enable one to navigate through some of the white water rapids into being a bold and serene LGBT person of faith?

How can “coming out” be reframed as part of a process of forgiveness, of discovering merciful equality with others, of forging intergenerational sibling relations, of learning gentleness towards fragility? How can “coming out” be the beginning of creating “home” anew?

This day will help us shift away from thinking of GLBT persons as victims into honoring their gifts in the future transmission of the Catholic faith.
